Position Summary: In partnership with the Mt. Adams Institute, the Chugach National Forest is looking to support an intern with a focus on planning multi-disciplinary land and natural resource management. Primary emphasis areas will consist of working in geographic information systems to support recreation and wildlife management, environmental analysis and long-range forest planning functions.

The intern will receive formal and on-the-job training, and perform duties designed to orient the intern to the mission of the organization, including pertinent laws and governing regulations. The intern will work with resource specialists to gain experience in the practical application of laws, rules, regulations, policies, and procedures in a variety of resource management fields.

The intern will work with experienced Forest GIS specialists to update databases, ensure regional and national data standards are met, ensure data accuracy, resolve errors and update metadata. Duties will also include manipulating and analyzing geospatial data to support management decisions, planning, and monitoring activities; compile data to create maps for resource programs, planning documents, management alternatives and other projects.

There will be independent work on a variety of resource data to support the Forest's monitoring activities, project analyses, and Forest planning. The intern will work with local resource specialists to determine individual program and project needs and design products related to those specific needs. There will also be opportunities to be introduced to and support employees working in various other functions, such as archaeology, surveying, special uses, recreation, and wildlife management.

General Responsibilities (to include, but not limited to):

1. Support the maintenance of spatial (GIS) and tabular (INFRA) databases on the Forest.
